pulse

*"Ever changing, yet ever the same, the College is a part of us and we of it."
- President Williamson*

definition. A pulse is the rate at which the heart beats. In the human body, the pulse can be felt at the neck, the wrist, behind the knee, on the inside of the elbow, near the ankle, and at other places where arteries press against bone. The pulse that drives the Westminster is felt at many points as well- in classrooms, at campus events, in the New Wilmington community, and in the society where Westminster graduates will thrive, enriched by a solid liberal arts education. Every student is an artery, the motive behind every campus pulsation, without which, our campus would perish. For the past eleven years, President Williamson has served as the heart of this campus, and although the Westminster community will feel his absence, yet another strong, able heart will replace him, assuming the responsibility of retaining the vibrant life of the college. No matter the circumstances, the well-being of our campus is impenetrable. Because of every student, faculty member, and staff member, the pulse of Westminster will resonate in us forever, not just allowing our bodies to function, but allowing our education to advance, our lives to flourish, and our minds to thrive.

During Westminster's First-Year Orientation, students were welcomed to a friendly campus that offered a "Fresh Start". It was an opportunity for students to reflect, discuss, socialize and simply have fun during the transition to college life. Along with the routine processes of moving in and purchasing books, First-Year students had the chance to relax - from the open rehearsals with the Fresh Start choir to the entertaining Singled Out hosted by the Student Government Association. Students also attended an array of seminars that dealt with campus activities such as diversity services, campus ministries, various academic programs and Greek life.

"Fresh Start helped me learn my way around campus," Emily Landis, a First-Year Chemistry Major from New Waterford, Ohio said. "Volunteering their time and experience, the upperclassmen acquainted Westminster's new students with college life and prepare them for a new chapter - a social, spiritual, and academic fresh start."

Here to Help -- Fresh Start leaders Rhiannon Mondale and Steph Niziol lend a hand to incoming First-Year students as they move into Russell Hall.

september 7, 2007

On the evening of Friday, September 7th, a boat set off on a three hour tour. Rather than a shipwreck, the cruise resulted in an entertaining time for all aboard. The Gateway Clipper cruise has become an annual tradition and is one of the many fall highlights for students. At 11 p.m., over 200 students embarked on a riverboat that would take them through the rivers of Pittsburgh.

The setting, in addition to the night's pleasant weather, provided the perfect atmosphere to create a memorable experience. Viewing the stars and the city's skyline on the top deck while the ship cut through the moonlit waters, relaxing and mingling over drinks on the middle deck, and of course, dancing on the bottom deck were all highlights of the cruise. According to junior Stephanie Niziol, "It was really fun; the music was great, and it seemed like everyone had a good time. What could be a better way to kick off a new school year?"

The surprisingly warm September morning began on Market Street with a traditional Homecoming parade. "Within ten minutes, the streets were completely filled. It amazed me how much support these students received from the community," one spectator said as he recapped the parade. The float theme this year was Board Games, and the sisters of Alpha Gamma Delta were more than overjoyed when they were named the winners of the float competition. School spirit and Titan pride filled Burry Stadium as students, faculty, staff, and alumni later watched the game against Grove City.

After the Homecoming Candidates and float winners and were recognized at the game, the long-awaited Homecoming King and Queen were finally announced. Kevin Shields, a junior Music Education major, was crowned King, and Ashley Carnahan, a junior Business major, took the title of Queen.

Homecoming weekend was not only filled with memories of simply the games and parade. The festivities started on Thursday with SGA's Pep Rally, and ended Saturday evening with alumni reunion dinners. Westminster students and alumni have many memories to carry with them for years to come.

One of Westminster's most storied traditions returned on Nov. 7 and 8. Every four years, the Westminster Mock Convention is held for the party out of power; in this case, the Democratic Party. The Convention is an opportunity for students to voice their political opinions and to participate in a true democracy, where every vote truly does make a difference. Students get to experience the democratic process in action and debate the political issues most important to them.

The Mock Convention began with a keynote address by political commentator Bill Press. After delivering the address, he accepted any questions. Students first appeared apprehensive to state their opinions and ask questions concerning a subject as divisive as politics. However, they soon grew more interested and eager and were lining up at the microphones to discuss issues regarding immigration, the environment, healthcare, education, foreign relations, and gay rights.

The real draw of the Mock Convention was the second day of activities. It began with student delegates debating and voting on four key issues: war, gay rights, climate change, and immigration.

The Parade of Delegates was first, with students representing the regions of the Pacific West, Mountain West, Great Plains, Great Lakes, Northeast, Mid-Atlantic, Mid-South, and Deep South. Next, students representing Democratic presidential hopefuls John Edwards, Barack Obama, and Hillary Clinton gave nominating speeches. Students showed their support with signs, noisemakers, and their voices, in addition to dancing and running around after each speech. Then, the delegates were polled by region to vote for the candidate they preferred. It took three rounds of voting for a clear winner to appear: John Edwards.

‘Running a campaign was a lot of fun. It’s great to hear people on campus talking about your signs and the message you’re getting out there, but, if I’m called Hillary one more time, it’ll be bad news,’ Hillary Campaign Manager, Carsen Nesbitt, jokes.

CONVENTION 2007

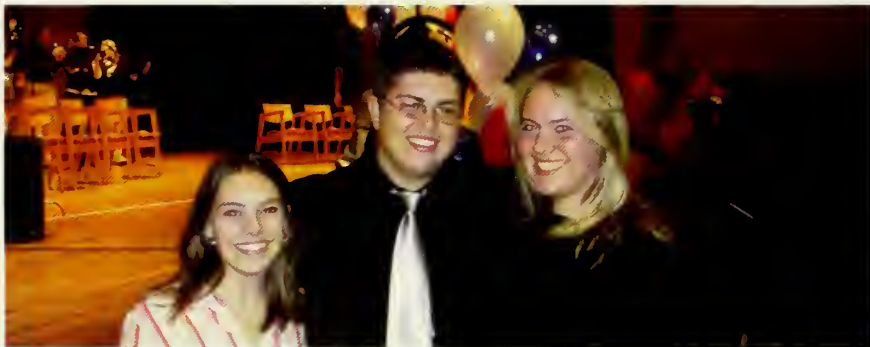

After the acceptance speech, students had the chance to propose vice-presidential candidates. Showcasing the “mock” nature of the Convention, comic television host Stephen Colbert handily won the nomination over such contenders as Al Gore, Dennis Kucinich, and Bill Press.

Awards were given to regions for categories such as being the most enthusiastic and having the best costumes.

Freshman Mike Disotell participated in the Convention as a delegate from the Pacific West region. He was interviewed for the Westminster television network by senior Alex Hines during the presidential nominations. He stated, “I wish more young people were as involved in real-life elections. The enthusiasm and level of participation during the Mock convention was extraordinary.”

The 2007 Democratic Mock Convention came to a close after many months of preparation and two full days of excitement.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM

*Hold on to Your Heart.
Cupid is Armed and Dangerous.*

For its fall production, Theatre Westminster had the unenviable task of making a play that is more than 400 years old accessible and, more importantly, entertaining to a modern audience. William Shakespeare's classic, A Midsummer Night's Dream, was cut down to fit into an hour and a half, while retaining the charm and beauty of the original. In this version, the concept is that a circus has been brought to Athens to celebrate the marriage of the Duke Theseus and his wife Hippolyta. The fairies of the forest are acrobats, led by King Oberon, the ringmaster, and Queen Titania, the lead acrobat. The storyline of the comedy remains the same, with a group of four young lovers and an acting troupe separately being influenced by the machinations of Oberon and his servant Puck.

The conceit of the circus was the idea of the play's director, Assistant Professor of Theater, Dr. Scott Mackenzie. The actors were supportive of Mackenzie's vision.

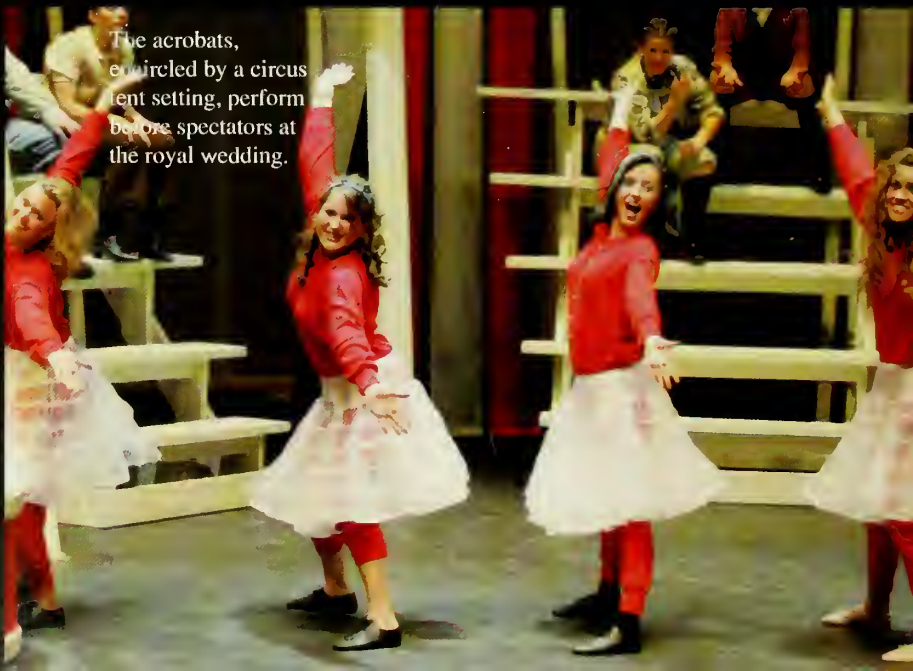

"Once I saw his ideas come into play and appear on stage, I got more and more intrigued. It's more fun and upbeat ... It worked well with what he was trying to do."

- Marisa Monahan, Titania

The stage was set up to look like the inside of a circus tent, which transformed into the forest when the lights were turned down and sparkling drapes descended. The sets allowed the audience to use their imaginations to become lost in the illusion of the settings meant to be portrayed. Rather than having a lavish set to distract viewers from poor acting, the actors were required to use their talents to bring the story to life, which they succeeded in doing. It was obvious that a lot of preparation went into the production. The hard work and long hours put in by all involved- the acting, directing, choreographing, and designing- paid off in the form of a polished, entertaining production of a classic play.

Four performances took place, on Thursday, Nov. 8 through Saturday, Nov. 10 at 7:30 p.m., and on Sunday, Nov. 11 at 2:30 p.m. in the Beeghly Theater.

HEAD

Head and Heart - Members of the Gospel Choir, Arianne Cauchie, Lorre Henderson, Joie Faust, Rachel Strohm, Susannah Monroe, Leila Brandt and Alison Paden bring some rhythm to the night.

On Sunday, December 9, the long-standing College tradition of Christmas Vespers took place. More than 230 students participated in this year's presentation, entitled "The Christmas Miracle... Celebrating the Birth of the Christ Child," held at 7 p.m. in Orr Auditorium. The Rev. James R. Mohr II describes this annual worship service as a "non-denominational Christmas worship experience," which includes Protestant and Catholic students as part of the worship leadership, members from the various choirs, and students in the Theater Department. The service presents music from a variety of vocal and instrumental ensembles, including the Gospel Choir, Bell Choir, Women's Chorus, Men's Chorus, Concert Choir, flute choirs, woodwind quintet, and brass ensemble. Also featured are liturgical dancers, Scripture readings, carols, a dramatic presentation, and "Miracle of Miracles," a message from Rev. Mohr.

This year's Christmas

Vespers had some differences from previous services. The choirs sang together as one mass choir rather than each doing individual pieces of music. "This added to the depth of the sound," Mohr said. Father Philip Farrell, rector of St. Camillus Church in New Castle, participated in the service for the first time this year.

Mohr believes what makes Christmas Vespers special is the level of interest it generates. "I guess what always stands out for me is the commitment on the part of our students to participate in the service," Mohr said.

In addition to Sunday evening worship service, the entire group gathered on Saturday morning for a videotaping coordinated by the Communications Department. This was broadcast on Sunday, December 16, at 7 p.m. Close to 2,000 people attended the Sunday evening service. The amount of preparation that goes into the service helps make for a memorable experience.

Aside from Shakespeare, the Westminster Theater Department also tackled author Ken Kesey's most famous work, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." Dale Wasserman's play, which is based on the novel, revolves around a wayward man named McMurphy who avoids imprisonment by becoming institutionalized. Eileen Hendrickson directed the play, which ran from February 21-24 in Beeghly Theater. "I really enjoyed the production," said First-Year student Benjamin Morneweck, who attended the play. "It was performed well, and it was apparent that everyone was prepared. It was the best show I've seen in a while." The play featured many of the school's talented students, including Barry Unis as McMurphy, Amber Scalfari as the vindictive Nurse Ratched, and Dan LoVerde in his first college theatrical performance as Billy Bibbitt, a troubled but engaging psychiatric patient. Michael Slane, Westminster instructor of theatre, was the scenic and technical director, and Dan Konnen, Westminster stage manager, was the lighting designer.

11th Annual Relay for Life

The brothers of Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity organized the 11th annual Relay For Life at Burry Stadium on April 12th. Despite the rain and chilly weather, numerous students walked around the track and raised over $22,000 for the American Cancer Society's services, programs, and research. This year's Relay had plenty of entertainment: a car show featuring custom and classic cars, carnival-style games, a Chinese auction, and food stands. A team by the name of Winck Trucking raised the most money with nearly $5,000. The sisters of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority came in a close second by raising over $3,000.

This year's annual VolleyRock began on Friday, May 2, with a concert in the amphitheatre. Hundreds of students came to see JD Eicher and the Goodnights, who opened the show, as well as Red Wanting Blue and Matt White. The VolleyRock tournament began the following morning at 9 a.m. where over 700 students, consisting of 103 teams, participated. Students were able to practice and enjoy a pancake breakfast hosted by Phi Mu. The participants received lunch from Sodexo and had Quaker Steak and Lube's infamous wings for dinner. Along with the food and volleyball, students were also able to enjoy sno cones, an inflatable obstacle course, a human fly trap, music, and plenty of prizes. Andy Smith's team, "The Bearded Bears," received the winning title, as well as bragging rights, for this year's VolleyRock.

Commencement Speech

Good afternoon and welcome President Williamson, Board of Trustees, students, faculty, alumni, families, and friends:

One of my first assignments as a college student at Westminster was to stand on the hill next to the amphitheater and look out across the lake. Dr. Perkins, or Jim as he was known to our Inquiry class, instructed us to behold the shadows and the watery reflections created by the telephone poles on the opposite bank and to write what we observed. That was the extent of our directions on the subject, and needless to say, we were all a bit confused; however, I was determined to find the hidden meaning in this enigmatic assignment. The next day, in the afternoon heat, I traipsed down to the lake from my dorm on the second floor of Jeffers Hall with resolve in my heart and pen and paper in my hand.

When I arrived at the hill, I did not experience the epiphany I was hoping for. I could barely see anything on the other side of the lake, and the brilliance of the early September sun made my task even more difficult. I took a seat on the bench next to the rock, annoyed. As an overly zealous bunch of mosquitoes hovered around my temples, I asked myself some questions: what in the world was such an assignment? Why is Jim so ashamed to admit why did I

The next day, all of these questions were answered for my classmates and me. We reconvened for Inquiry, and after several unsuccessful ventures, Jim finally explained the notion behind the nonsense. He wanted us to observe that, no matter where we stood along the bank of the lake, the shadows of the telephone poles would remain stationary, as they were, after all, determined by the sun. Their reflections in the water, however, moved as we moved; they were always angled toward our point of view. This was to illustrate for us that, like the shadows, some things are well out of our control. The epiphany had come.

We all experience such events: either create nor perpetuate and address. Unexpected sorrows either as random and as intermittent as clouds that pass in front of the sun. We cannot control these events; we can only react to them. But our reactions are only half of our total participation in life. The rest is occupied by the paths we can choose and by the decisions we can make. It is the sum of our reactions and our own decisions that makes us who we are. We may not be able to control where the shadows of our lives fall, but we can control the direction of our choices.

I think today my fellow students and I can all look back on our time here at Westminster and remember many lessons learned that are very worthwhile to us. For some, it may be writing code for a computer program or the function of a Neapolitan chord. For others, it may be a chemistry experiment or the proper way to teach kindergarteners their ABCs. For still others, it may be the solution to a proof or the inner workings of the mind of Hemingway. Personally, I remember a great deal of knowledge that I am very fortunate to have received and that I will use for the rest of my life. But it is the telephone pole lesson, my very first lesson at Westminster, that I choose to have on my mind as I leave this school because it is the one lesson I have learned that applies to every aspect of my life, academic and otherwise. It is a lesson that teaches us how to deal with my sorrows and to find my happiness. I hope each of you takes some time today to reflect on the lessons your own Dr. Perkins taught you, lessons you can use to find your happiness. Perhaps, like me, you remember an obscure assignment that did not make sense to you at the time but had an unexpected and lasting impact on your life. I know we all have at least one, because to this day, every time I walk past the lake, I think about those telephone poles and that seemingly pointless assignment that changed my life. Thank you so much.

world could be the purpose of making us do this? And (this one I choose to come to this school? questions and several more would come and me, for the rest of our lives. After we shared our similar and Jim finally explained the notion us to observe that, no matter of the lake, the shadows of the stationary, as they were, after all, reflections in the water, however, determined by our position our point of view. "Geek Week is a great event from the faculty perspective because it is completely planned and executed by the students. I just get to watch and have fun. I am always amazed at the level of dedication the students have in planning the events. The teams that compete have a great time as well. There is a friendly rivalry developing between the Chemistry and the other departments. Teams from chemistry have won twice. No other department has won twice yet..."

- Peter Smith, Assistant Professor of Chemistry

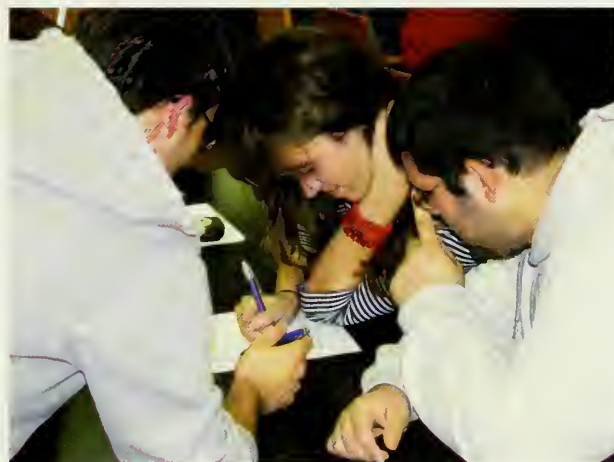

Applying Math - Math experts Anthony Colwell, Samantha Leipheimer, Jon Maielli and Ryan Brolley make the Math department proud.

Geek Week is an entirely student-organized competition between the 5 science departments (Mathematics, Psychology, Biology, Physics and Chemistry), where each night of the week is devoted to one of the 5 sciences. The team (or department) that comes out on top at the end of the week wins the title of "Geekiest" or most well-rounded science. This department has the honor of displaying the homemade trophy (composed of an old microscope, calculator, test tube, and wire board) for the next year, as well as official bragging rights.

- Amy Thomas, Chemistry Major, Class of 2008

Honors Convocation

This years Honors Convocation was held on April 19th in Orr Auditorium. Hundreds of students were recognized during this annual spring event to celebrate their academic excellence. To welcome family and friends, Rev. James Mohr opened the convocation with a prayer and President Williamson offered a few wise words. Dean Mann recognized students who made the Dean's List during the fall semester, those in honor societies, and numerous scholar-athletes. Various department professors gave certain students a department award for their success in a certain subject. Many were also acknowledged who have been granted scholarships, prizes, and awards. Faculty, family, friends, and students were invited to attend a reception after the convocation.

"The Honors Convocation is a wonderful tradition at Westminster that allows all students to be recognized for their scholastic achievements throughout the academic year. It was extremely impressive to see how many Westminster students have excelled academically and it's great that their accomplishments are acknowledged."

Oxford

Westminster abroad

The study abroad program at Westminster is very diversified. Students have the option of traveling abroad in any semester to almost anywhere in the world. They can even take a travel study course to experience another culture and lifestyle for just a few weeks. The program offers endless opportunities and amazing experiences. This past semester 27 students lived in Oxford, England. These students lived with families and were open to experiencing life and culture in a different country. They not only studied in Oxford, but also had numerous opportunities to travel all throughout Europe. Junior, Bridget Roth was one of these students. Throughout her trip she was able to travel to 8 different countries, and when asked about her experiences, Roth had nothing but good stories that never seem to end. The semester abroad was a life changing experience that provided her with unforgettable memories. "If you had asked me last year what I expected to come of my experiences abroad, I never would have expected the length of the list I could give you. I traveled to eight countries, got blessed by the Pope, rode a gondola and climbed to the top of the Eiffel Tower all in 3 months time. And that's just the tip of the iceberg."

"Going to Oxford was the best decision I've ever made in my life. I traveled to unbelievable places, made irreplaceable friends and had the time of my life. I would give anything to go back again."

The Study Abroad program is one of the many educational strong points at Westminster. Dr. Jeff Bersett and Doreen Matune ensure that students remain on-track while abroad and never hesitate to send the occasional "Hello, how are you?" messages. Students are able to study in Oxford, England through the college itself or anywhere else in the world through affiliate programs. Students who choose this path on their four-year journey learn much more than they will in a classroom, whether it is from standing in El Museo del Prado in Madrid to look at masterpieces by world renown artists or sitting in Le parc du château de Versailles in France reading a book on a sunny afternoon. These fortunate students learn how to interact with people on a global scale and increase their understanding of other cultures and other ways of life.

I think that being a Titan Cheerleader has always been a fun experience, even though it has been different every year. We had just as many new girls as we had returning from previous years, which was a challenge at first. However, we used that challenge to improve and change the squad around for the better. Everyone brought new ideas and was willing to work hard to accomplish all that we could. One of our main goals this year was to restore Westminster's school spirit, which was a goal that we successfully accomplished. //

This season Coach McNeil wanted the Men's Track team to let other schools know that we were coming. I feel he succeeded in this as he put a lot of focus on relays such as the 4x100 and 4x400 and others that generally indicate strength in a team. Though we were small in number this past season, our accomplishments should set the ground for a very competitive Men's Track team in the near future with incoming recruits under Coach McNeil.

NOW! That's What I Call ... sing n' swing

Sing 'n Swing, the final event of Greek Week, took place on the last Saturday in April in Orr Auditorium. This annual event displays the dancing talents of the sororities and fraternities on campus in which all students, family, friends, and faculty are invited. The student-choreographed show kept the audience entertained by this year's theme, "Now CDs." Sigma Kappa's "I'm a Barbie Girl" and Theta Chi's "I'm a Believer" stunned the audience but Zeta Tau Alpha and Alpha Sigma Phi took away the title of the 2008 Sing 'n Swing Champs. Sister and Brother of the Year awards were announced as well as Greek God and Goddess. "I had no idea our campus had so much dancing talent," sophomore Courtney Williams said. "I had so much fun watching it and I already can't wait to see next year's Sing 'n Swing."

Moving on

after 231 years of combined service to Westminster College

Dr. Paul Wozniak chats about his time here at Westminster.

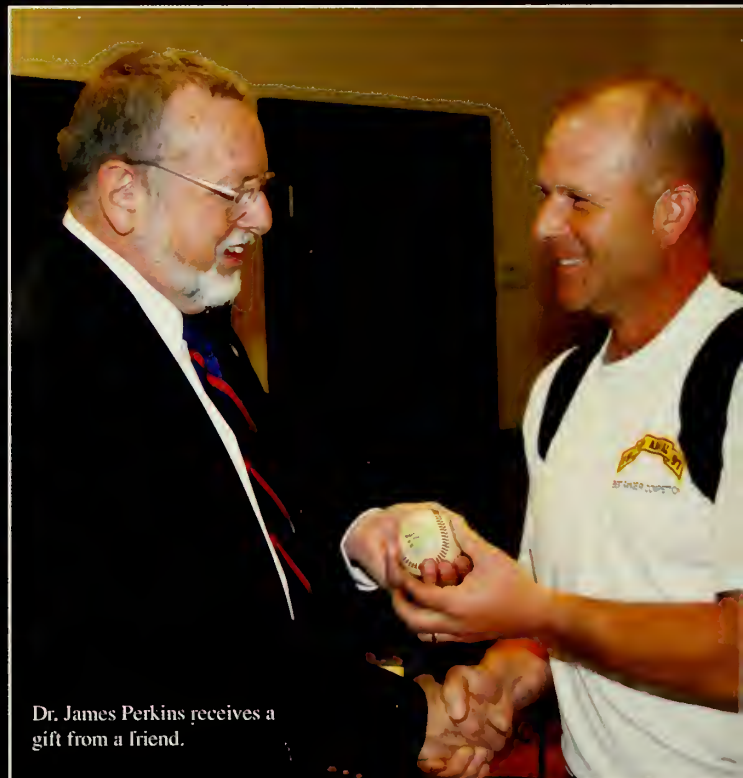

Honoring six retirees and celebrating 231 years of combined service, an Open House Retirement Reception was held on May 2 in the Witherspoon Room. Those recognized were Warren Hickman, Sam Lightner, Patrick McCarthy, Jim Perkins, Paul Wozniak, Eileen Hendrickson, and David Brautigam.

The reception was very casual, but also memorable. "It was nice, very well-attended, and unique," Denise Guthery, Admissions receptionist, said. "Whoever came up with this idea is brilliant."

Visitors were able to walk from table to table to speak with the retirees and their families, as well as help themselves to punch and hors d'oeuvres. The secretaries of the retirees organized a slide show that played throughout the reception as well as books that were set out for students and friends to leave their kind thoughts and memories.

McGill receives a facelift

Westminster's McGill Memorial Library, built 1938, expanded 1966, renovated 2008.

McGill Library has seen many changes during its time, but now it will see a complete renovation. President Tom Williamson says that the goal of the renovation is to bring the nearly 70-year-old facility up to current standards in all areas while retaining its historic features and character.

The major improvements include a new ground floor compact shelving system, which will increase total library shelf capacity by almost one-third; a new elevator, updated restrooms, and the opening of the original 1938 entrance; a new Children's and Community Room; new group study areas as well as a new circulation desk; and many infrastructure improvements. Students have dealt with many of the changes during the school year.

Molly Spinney, head librarian, says that the idea will be to continually maintain convenient student and public access to library resources throughout the construction period.

"It's an exciting and challenging time, and I'm sure there will be a certain amount of learning as we go along." - Molly Spinney, Head Librarian

Burry Stadium renovation

Memorial Field, built 1950, renamed Harold Burry Stadium 1997, renovated 2008

The Burry Stadium renovations began after the 2007 football season ended. The $1.7 million project includes artificial turf, lighting, a terraced entrance plaza, and bleacher renovation and replacement. A key feature of the project will be the Joseph B. Fusco Plaza, which is dedicated to the man who played, coached, and led the Titans to four national championships from 1972-90. Fusco Plaza will include outdoor seating and will serve as an attractive gathering area and location for receptions and other events.

A new arched entryway will provide an aesthetically-appealing gateway to the field and stadium. The highlight of the renovation is the installation of the artificial turf. "The great thing about artificial turf is its flexibility for serving different sports and activities and its capacity for heavy use. This project will end up benefiting just about every student at Westminster College," said Jim Dafler, director of athletics. The Memorial Field renovations are highly anticipated and will greatly add to the Westminster campus.

Work begins on the construction of the Joseph B. Fusco Plaza, a tribute to the man who lead the Titan football team to four national championships as head coach from 1972-1990.

leaving a legacy

President R. Thomas Williamson

Dear Class of 2008:

Westminster is simply and truly a great place with great people who do their best to make the College and her students a little better each day. You and I will be “graduating” together. Our years here will remain in our hearts – a gift that we shall carry with us for life. We ask God’s blessings for each of you as you venture forth remembering this place and the people who make it great.

Sincerely,

R. Thomas Williamson

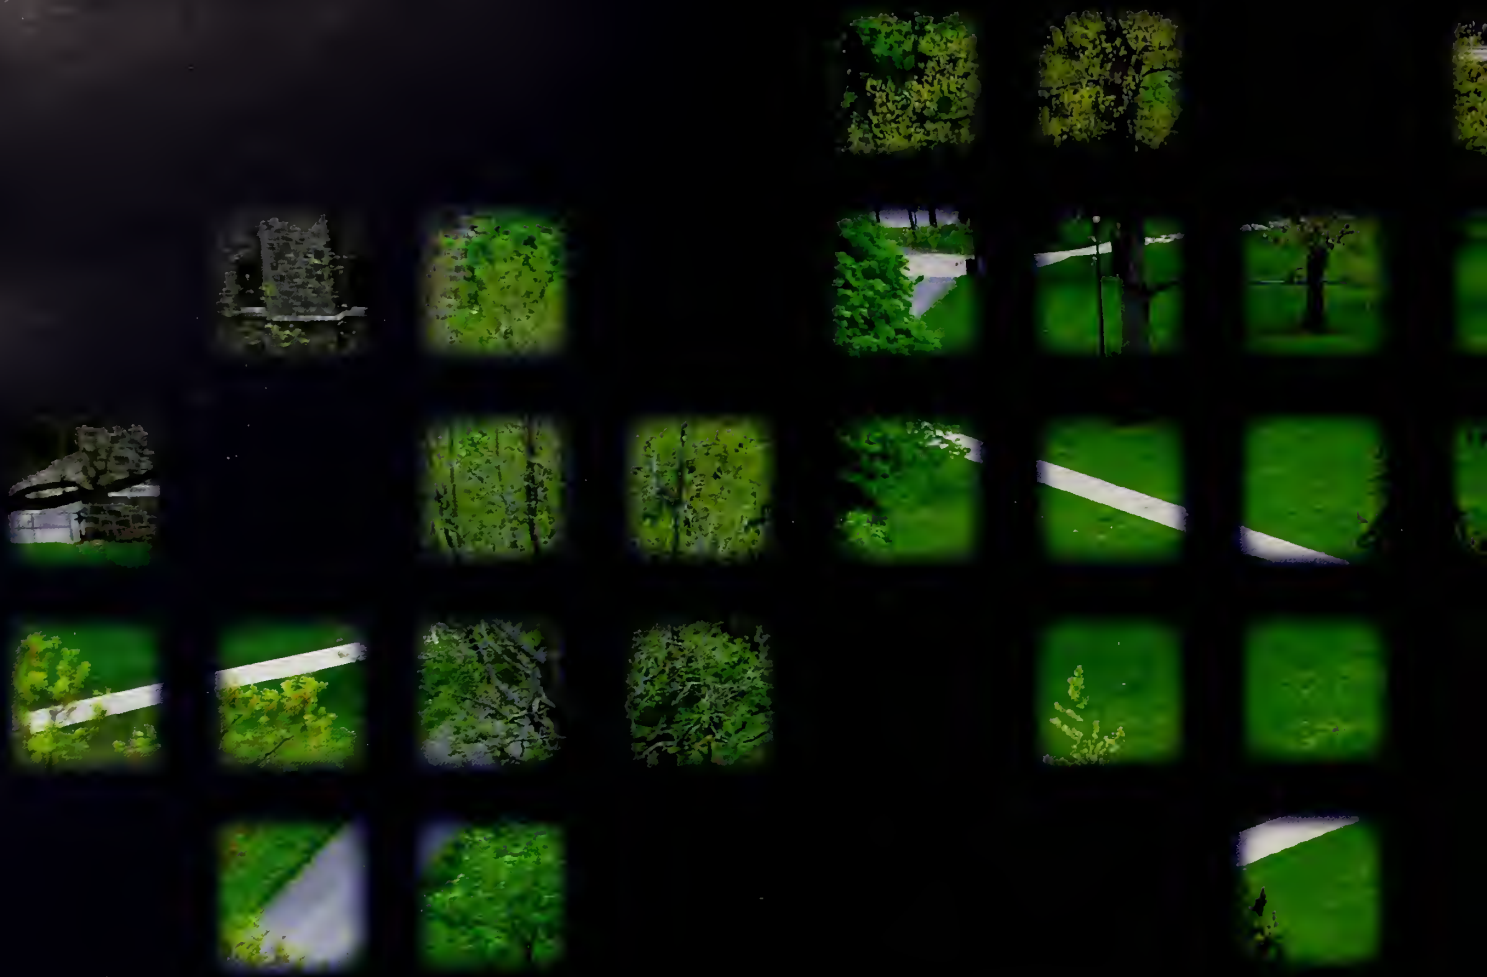

1997-2008

"Ever changing, yet ever the same, the college is a part of us and we of it."

- President Williamson. Inaugural address

The heart of Westminster, propelled by the students, faculty, and campus staff, continues to throb, no matter what time of year. Although the class of 2008 will depart the Westminster community and contribute to the pulses of other facets of society, the imprint they have made upon Westminster legacy will last, and yet another class of students will become a proponent of our community. As global society changes, so does the Westminster campus, but as long as the pulse of our college is driven by the best and brightest of that global society, the heart of Westminster will continue to beat, and the traditions and principles of our campus will remain forever.

a letter from the editor

When I first joined the Argo as a staff photographer, I had no idea that the next year I'd end up being Editor-in-Chief. However, it's an experience that I wouldn't trade for anything. This book truly has become my pulse, for there is never a time that I'm not planning or thinking of something for it. From the summer yearbook camp (which was an experience in itself), to the stress of staff members disappearing, to the deadlines I didn't think we would meet, it had been a crazy and wonderful journey. I absolutely could not have done it without the help of my editors. Dan, thank you so much for getting all of the business stuff sorted out and organized. I know it was a huge mess for you to inherit, and you did such an awesome job of cleaning it up! Chelsea, I know it's been really stressful getting all of that copy done, especially when it just popped up out of nowhere, but you've done a great job and I'm so glad you were on staff! Laura, thank you so much for stepping in when we really needed someone. Your photos are undeniably beautiful! Mandie, thank you so much for not giving up on being photography editor. I know it was way more stressful than it should have been, but I appreciate everything that you've done. And Jeremy...what can I say? Without you, this book probably would have fallen apart. Your designs are absolutely beautiful. Thank you so much for your willingness to do whatever needed to get done, even if it wasn't your job. You will be missed! To all of the photography and copy staff members, thank you so much for all of the hard work you put into this book. We couldn't have done it without you.

There are some other people that were always there for me when I needed them: Connie McGinnis, thank you so much for your constant support and help. Thank you to David Bollman of Herff Jones, Jim Rainey and all other DaVor photographers, Deans Edman and Hawthorne, everyone in the Student Affairs office (especially Kathy Suosio and Beth Brooks), Physical Plant, the Student Publications Board, and President Williamson. A big thank you goes out to the ladies in the Career Center, who let me vent to them whenever my stress level was through the roof. To everyone who we demanded photos, quotes, and any other information from, thank you.

Love Lives On

*Those we love
are never really lost to us - we feel them
in so many special ways-
through friends.
they always cared about
and dreams they left behind, in beauty that they added to our days...
in words of wisdom we still carry with us
and memories that never will be gone...
Those we love are never really lost to us -
For everywhere their special love lives on.*

- Amianda Bradley
